We recently made a change in order to make it look the same in both FF and IE. IE was centering the text in the order form which looked bad. So now it basically will expand out to whatever cell it is in.

What you can do is surround your Nanacast embedded HTML code with a table that is set to a specific width. This approach gives you the ability to control the width but also will look the same in FF and IE and won't have the form-field text centered in IE.
