When someone clicks on an affiliate link it counts a stat. If that person clicks on that link over and over it only counts the first click so as not to skew the stats. It does not matter who that person is... unless of course it's someone clicking on their own affiliate link from the same IP address registered to their account. Our system knows it is them and does not register it as a click. That is part of our smart anti affiliate theft system. Our system does not allow stats to be skewed by affiliates clicking their own link. Also, if they try to buy off their own link, it knows it is them as well and does not reward them the commissions.
